Timeless Classics

I grew up in the car culture of Southern California in the 1960s, attended many drag races and custom car shows, and developed a love and appreciation for classic muscle cars of that era.

I first became involved in practical shooting as a member of the original Southwest Pistol League in Los Angeles in the mid-1970s and was introduced to one of the all-time-classic firearms, the Colt 1911A1. That attachment to handguns and classic firearms has continued to this day.

I've owned examples of the classic 1911A1 pistol, in one form or another, for most of my adult life. I think one of the reasons I tend to choose handguns over anything else is because of the challenge they provide. To be sure, hitting the 10-ring of a high-power rifle target while trying to dope the wind and mirage at 600 yards is extremely difficult, and being able to smoke a clay pigeon using a finely fitted shotgun has its challenges as well.

But for me, because of the various types of competitions available for a handgun — from long-range silhouette, to Olympic pistols, to the various action events, to just every day tin can plinking — the handgun is the most-challenging and rewarding of all of the firearms to master.

Each category of firearms has its classic from back in the day: think back to the 1903 Springfield rifle, the P08 Luger and the aforementioned 1911A1 at the turn of the century, through the Thompson submachine gun of the 1920s, the M1 Garand and then M14/M1A of WWII, through the pre-1964 Winchester Model 70 bolt-actioned rifle, and continuing on through the other classic Winchester of that era, the Model 12-pump shotgun.

Current classic firearms would arguably include the Remington M700 rifle, the Glock pistol, the S&W Model 10 revolver and the Remington 870 shotgun. I think that's what I enjoy the most about firearms, other than shooting them, is the rich history and appreciation of the finely engineered classic guns from then to now.

We have assembled a unique buyer's guide of handguns and rifles for you with the hope that you will find something between these pages that you can turn into a classic of your own.

Regards!

The Bargain All-Star

Nine Solid Reasons to Carry the CZ P-09

By Brad Fitzpatrick

"... [it is] a thoroughly modern combat handgun with the goods to compete in this crowded field."

There are few niches in the firearm market that are more competitive than the full-size tactical pistol segment.

Perhaps more than any other type of firearm, these guns serve as life insurance for thousands of uniformed military and police officers on a daily basis, and gun companies invest millions in the design, production and manufacture of these guns in an effort to offer a competitive option.

There are some very good guns that don't get the recognition they deserve in this arena. Case in point, CZ's high-capacity P-09 semiautomatic, the latest offering from a company that produced one of Europe's favorite service guns, the CZ-75.

The P-09 may trace its heritage back to the 75, but it is its own gun, a thoroughly modern combat handgun with the goods to compete in this crowded field. There are a lot of reasons to love the CZ and here are nine of them.

1 VERSATILITY

The P-09 was designed to accommodate a variety of different tastes.

For starters, it features an ambidextrous design, so left- or right-handed shooters can operate the controls on this pistol equally well.

In addition, the P-09 offers the shooter the choice between a decocker or a manual safety, and the gun can be converted back and forth relatively easily. The large accessory rail offers plenty of space for mounting lights or lasers, and the oversized trigger guard makes it easy to shoot the gun even while wearing tactical gloves.

The P-09 comes with three interchangeable back straps (sized as small, medium and large) so it's easy to customize the grip with components provided with the initial purchase of the firearm. There's also a version with a threaded barrel for suppressors.

2 DEPENDABILITY

Combat pistols are thoroughly tested and that testing requires heavy abuse to ensure that the gun will perform under any and all conditions. The CZ is a quality-built gun — all you need to do is pick one up and cycle the action a few times to feel how smooth and well-made this pistol is.

The large extractor offers peace of mind and the gun that I tested went through several hundred rounds of ammunition, both rapid and slow fire, without a single malfunction. I did my best to give the CZ every opportunity to fail, firing rapid shots with a limp-wristed grip, shooting full magazines in rapid succession, shooting low-power loads and cheap, dirty ammo. It is a hammer-fired gun, which offers some peace of mind over a striker-fired pistol because the slide doesn't have to be pulled back to fire the gun in the event of primer failure.

3 ACCURACY

With Federal's HST ammunition, the P-09 managed sub-2-inch

groups at 25 yards off a fixed bench, which is excellent for a production pistol. But bench-rest accuracy and real-world tactical accuracy are two different things, and that's an important distinction to make. Mounting a handgun into a machine rest will tell you how well the chamber is cut, how uniform the rifling is and what the pistol's inherent accuracy is.

Field accuracy is harder to quantify and it is affected by grip shape, balance, the quality of the trigger pull, the shooter's influence on the handgun when delivering the shot and so forth. The P-09 is accurate from the bench, and its ergonomics and design make it an easy gun to shoot well in the field, too.

4 CAPACITY

If you're relying on a gun to see you through a real crisis, it's good to know that it holds 20 rounds of 9mm ammunition (19+1, 15+1 in .40 S&W). That's a lot of shooting, and if you carry a loaded 9mm pistol with a spare magazine, you'd have more than three dozen rounds ready for action.

For concealed carry or home defense guns, that's overkill, but duty guns are a different story altogether. That prodigious capacity doesn't cause the grip to expand to the size of a liter soda bottle either; the grip

OUTFITTING YOUR P-09

The P-09 comes ready for duty but if you want to make additions, here are some ideas:

I. CUSTOM SIGHTS

CZ Custom offers a wide selection of iron sights for the P-09, including fiber optic, duty and tactical rear sights, and fiber optic front sights. Finding a set of iron sights that allow you to shoot over a suppressor can be tough but CZ also offers a set of higher sights designed for use with pistols that are outfitted with suppressors. CZ Custom iron sights retail for between $80–85.

WEB: CZCustom.com

II. LASER AND LIGHT OPTIONS

Crimson Trace offers a wide selection of different laser and light options, including the new Rail Master Pro that features both a laser (red or green) and a high-intensity LED light. This unit is compact yet it serves as both a laser and a light, maximizing the space available on the accessory rail. The Rail Master Pro has an MSRP of $279 with a red laser and $379 with a green laser.

WEB: CrimsonTrace.com

III. LASER DOTS

LaserLyte's new Center Mass laser offers a ring of eight laser dots that surround a central aiming point, providing for rapid target acquisition even in low light. The unit is very light and extremely durable. The cost is $164.95.

WEB: LaserLyte.com

The CZ's fire controls were set close to the frame, making for a slim profile, yet were easy to manipulate.

The smooth trigger and generous area around the trigger on the P09 make for effective shooting with gloves on.

The P-09 uses the tried and true three-dot sight system, which is fast and effective.

remains relatively thin, given the magazine capacity, and is comfortable for shooters with a wide range of hand sizes.

5 BALANCE

Because it holds 20 rounds, the P-09 needs to be appropriately balanced, it is just that, and with a full magazine it points naturally. Even when the magazine is loaded to half-capacity, the gun is still well-balanced. The grip helps things; it has an appropriate angle and is wide enough to absorb recoil and narrow enough to be comfortable. The low slide and excellent sights make target acquisition easy, and accurate double-taps can be delivered very quickly.

6 TRIGGER

The P-09 utilizes the Omega DA/SA Trigger System. In double-action mode, the pull is a relatively heavy 10 pounds; in SA mode, it breaks at slightly less than 4 pounds. It's a clean, smooth trigger and one of the best I've found on any standard production gun, especially given the price point. The trigger contour is also well thought-out; it features a straight center section with a steep angle on the bottom.

7 SLEEK PROFILE

The low bore axis means that there isn't a lot of gun above the CZ P-09's polymer frame. That helps make the gun easier to shoot quickly by transferring the recoil up the shooter's arm rather than around the axis of the wrist, but it also has an additional benefit of reducing its overall height. This helps with recovery during recoil and aids in delivering faster follow-up shots.

The front edges of the slide have been angled, and the slide stop, decocker (or, if you prefer, the manual safety) and the magazine release button are all low-profile and won't snag.

The sights also have a smooth, low-profile design. This is obviously a gun that was engineered with special attention to creating a sleek, smooth, easy-to-draw profile.

8 SIZE

In a world in which gun companies are producing semiautomatic handguns that ride the fence between full-size duty guns and more-compact carry guns, the P-09 is a bona fide combat pistol. That's not to say it's heavy (it weighs just under 30 ounces unloaded) or that it is oversized and unwieldy. That simply means it's a full-frame, high-capacity, manageable pistol with a relatively long barrel and plenty of gripping surface, a purpose-built gun that was designed with tactical applications in mind.

9 PRICE

The CZ P-09 is priced between $530–$596, making it unequivocally one of the best bargains in the world of tactical pistols.

I shot several hundred rounds at the range before I checked the specifications from CZ and was surprised that the gun retailed for under $600. I would have guessed it at a $700 or even $800, and the CZ P-09 has the look and feel of any gun in that range. Actual price in stores may vary, so you might find one under $500. If you do, buy it. You won't be sorry. GW

FEDERAL'S HST AMMUNITION

For the tests performed here, I used Federal Premium HST ammo, which is available in 9mm Luger, .40 Smith & Wesson and .45 ACP.

Because of its defensive and tactical applications, HST ammunition undergoes a battery of tests and it has proven to be effective as a defensive bullet. All HST ammunition is loaded with Federal Premium nickel-plated brass cases and has waterproofing on the case neck and around the primer for reliable function in the worst conditions. The tapered hollow point bullet has a tapered jacket profile that aids in consistent feeding.

Co-aligned internal and external skiving on the bullet allow for rapid expansion and massive shock transfer while maintaining a solid structure that penetrates deep. The HST ammunition used in this test proved to be very reliable and accurate, and groups were consistent. There was no excess fouling with these loads, nor were there any failures to feed, chamber, extract or eject the ammunition or spent cartridge cases.

PRIMARY DEFENSE

Reliable, High-End and Rugged Duty Sidearms

Handguns are the primary defensive arms of police, special investigators and many military officers. While these professionals hope they never need their firearm, they must be absolutely certain of their gun's reliability and firepower in the few moments once or twice a lifetime they might.

To that end, the market offers high-end and production models in a staggering array of configurations and popular defensive calibers. At a minimum, they are ruggedly built and designed to withstand thousands of rounds without gun-related malfunctions. Some are rated for use in marine environments. Most have accessory rails to receive tactical lights, lasers and other mission-essential gear, and a lot of them have night sights of some sort.

This selection of duty-ready sidearms represents top manufacturers and some of the most exciting models they offer. We hope you can find your next duty-ready handgun in these pages.

Savage Arms' New Axis II XP Is an Affordable Rifle & Scope Combo

Story and Photos by Tom Tabor

One-Two PUNCH

The business of manufacturing of firearms isn't always smooth and trouble-free. As such, in the 1960s and throughout the 1980s, Savage Arms struggled against an onslaught of competition.

During that era, ownership of the company changed frequently before finally culminating in a bankruptcy filing in 1988. Many feared this would be the final blow to the Savage legacy, but we now know that didn't happen. The credit for the company's survival goes to Ron Coburn. As president/CEO of Savage, he immediately implemented a series of carefully laid strategies and production changes that brought the company back from the brink.

A large part of the Coburn plan was to continue the company's efforts to construct affordable and high-quality rifles and to make sure they had a high degree of accuracy. The Axis series centerfire rifles are a perfect example of that, as I learned when I had the chance to review the Axis II XP.

THE AXIS II XP PACKAGE

When the Axis was first released a few years ago, it quickly became one of Savage's most-popular hunting models. Being so well received by the world's shooters, the company recently decided to take the rifle to a new level by offering a slightly modified version in a ready-to-shoot package called the Axis II XP.

"Its weather-resistant exterior is perfectly matched to the harsh conditions frequently encountered in many hunting environments."

This package included a Weaver Kaspas 3-9x40mm scope, which comes from the factory already mounted and boresighted, but the benefits don't stop there.

Rather than possessing a traditional-style trigger like the original Axis, the new Axis II XP comes equipped with an AccuTrigger. The AccuTrigger is a great system that allows the rifle to be adjusted to very light trigger pull weights and still be safe to use in the field for hunting.

To adjust the trigger, the rifle stock must first be removed. Following that, a small adjustment tool, which comes with each rifle, is inserted into a hole located near the rear of the trigger assembly. A turn in one direction will increase the weight of the pull; when turned in the opposite direction, it lessens it. The test rifle came from the factory with the trigger already adjusted to 2.68 pounds (five-pull average), and the consistency between those five pulls was extremely good, varying by a mere 3.2 ounces.

The action design on the Axis II XP is a common one used on many Savage rifles and was developed in an effort to limit the amount of machining needed to produce it. Less factory machining equates into less production cost and those savings are passed on to the customer in the form of lower rifle prices.

This design results in the rear portion of the bolt being a bit larger in diameter than most other actions. While not necessarily unattractive in appearance, it does make Savage centerfire rifles easy to recognize. In recent years I have shot many Savage rifles that possessed this action and have always found them to function very well and the accuracy to be very good.

It is a push-feed design with plunger-type ejectors located within the recessed face of the bolt. Twin locking lugs are present, which have been positioned up front. The cast metal bolt handle comes non-checked with the knob being uniquely oval-shaped. I particularly liked the fact that the Axis II action was designed so that bolt could be opened without needing to take the safety off. This is a great safety feature.

Removing the Axis II bolt from the receiver was a little tricky and to do so essentially became a multi-hands operation. After making certain the rifle is completely unloaded (chamber and magazine), the procedure detailed here must be followed. Place the safety in the "off" position and raise the bolt handle. The bolt release (located along the right side of the receiver) should now be pushed forward while simultaneously pulling the trigger and drawing the bolt rearward. This releases the

BEHIND THE NAME

The Savage story is an interesting one. The company's roots date back over 120 years ago when a Jamaican by the name of Arthur William Savage came to America and established his namesake company.

Preceding the founding of Savage Arms, Savage led an adventurous and exciting life. After being schooled in the United States and England, he decided to explore Australia. There he became the owner of the country's largest cattle ranches before moving to New York and establishing his future legacy as the founder of Savage Arms.

"Any rifle that can consistently group as well as this one did right out of the box while shooting factory-loaded ammunition is a great value."

bolt catch mechanism, allowing the bolt to be extracted to the rear.

The Axis II XP is available in a wide range of popular hunting calibers, including .223, .22-250, .243, .25-06, .270, .30-06, .308 and 7mm-08. Each rifle comes all-inclusive with an AccuTrigger, a synthetic stock, a detachable box-type magazine, sliding swivel studs and a ventilated recoil pad. I chose the .223 for testing, which, in my view, would make a perfect choice for the hunting of a wide range of small- to medium-sized game and predators. I like the hunting versatility that comes with this particular cartridge and believe it would be a near-perfect choice for anything from prairie dogs, ground squirrels, foxes, coyotes and marmots, all the way up to the hunting of feral hogs, with the right ammunition.

The magazine capacity was listed at four rounds by the factory, but I found I could easily squeeze in a fifth round. Quite likely this increase in magazine capacity over that purported by the factory is due to the smaller overall physical size of the .223 cartridges versus the other available caliber choices. Be aware that trying to squeeze in extra ammunition beyond what is listed from the factory can sometimes induce malfunctions.

The removable magazine is secured into place by way of an integral plastic latch system that consists of the same molded plastic material as the magazine floor plate.

The synthetic stock is matte black, which perfectly matches the finish of the 22-inch carbon steel 1:9 twist rate barrel. This barrel is rifled with a 1:9 twist rate, which is perfectly suited for the wide range of bullet weights this rifle is intended to use. The 1:9 twist rate will stabilize the heavier .224 caliber bullets (up to the 69–70 grain) that handloaders like to use in order to get a little extra range out the .223 caliber, and will also handle the more-standard 52–55-grain bullet weights that are more-common to this caliber. The heavier bullets will retain their velocity at longer ranges.

BURNING RANGE POWDER

After running a few solvent-soaked patches down the bore to clean out any left-behind debris from the manufacturing processes, I headed out to my private range for a powder-burning episode.

The boresighting had already been completed at the factory so my first zeroing rounds were already on paper. From there it was an easy operation to fine-tune the scope so my bullets were impacting precisely where I wanted them.

For my testing, I chose to shoot factory-loaded Federal Premium ammunition, which had been loaded with the excellent 43-grain Speer TNT Green bullets. I'd used this same ammunition previously on a prairie dog shooting-palooza a short time back and found it to be very consistent and accurate. With this ammo sighted in to hit point of aim point of impact at 100 yards, the bullets would drop -2.7 inches at 200 yards and drop -11.9 inches as they reached the 300-yard mark.

It didn't take long before I became impressed by the accuracy of both the Savage Axis II XP rifle and my Federal ammo. Averaging all of the three-shot groups produced a mean size of 1.45 inches with the smallest group measuring a mere 0.69 inches and the largest coming in at 1.875 inches. I felt these results were quite good, but I'm sure after the rifle has been fully broken in, and when shooting handloads that have been specifically tailored to the rifle, those group sizes could easily be squeezed down even smaller.

BARGAIN, QUALITY

The Savage Axis II XP is a great bargain for the money. While it might not be quite as "pretty" as some other rifles that have been adorned with a fancy walnut stock, high-gloss bluing and a slightly more elegant features, I really liked the simplicity and ruggedness of this particular rifle.

Its weather-resistant exterior is perfectly matched to the harsh conditions frequently encountered in many hunting environments. Even though the Kaspas riflescope supplied with this rifle essentially resides at the bottom of the Weaver hierarchy of products, I found the view it offered to be exceptionally clear and, overall, the scope functioned perfectly throughout my testing.

Obviously, the Axis II XP rifle/scope combo package was never intended to compete as a high-end collectable firearm. However, with an MSRP of only $489 for the entire rifle/scope package and the high degree of accuracy and performance that I experienced with it, I would be surprised if anyone could find anything to object about. Any rifle that can consistently group as well as this one did right out of the box while shooting factory-loaded ammunition is a great value.

For those shooters who don't want to take the time to find an appropriate scope base to fit the rifle, locate the proper height, size and color of rings, bore sight the rifle and even select and mount a scope, I would think the Axis II XP would be the perfect match for that individual. GW

FOR THE YOUTH

In addition to the adult version of the Axis II XP, there are sub-models designed specifically for younger shooters. Within that youth series there is a shortened black stock version as well as one that the company refers to as its "Muddy Girl" that comes in a very attractive pink camo pattern. If my arms weren't so long, I might have been persuaded to call a Muddy Girl my own but, alas, I decided to stay with the black version that would fit me better.

Savage Arms' youth version "Muddy Girl" Axis II XP would make an excellent choice for the younger shooter.

Hand Cannons

Firearms for Big & Small Game

Years ago, if a hunter wanted to use a handgun to pursue his sport, he was limited to the 22LR for small game and the .41 or .44 Magnum for larger game.

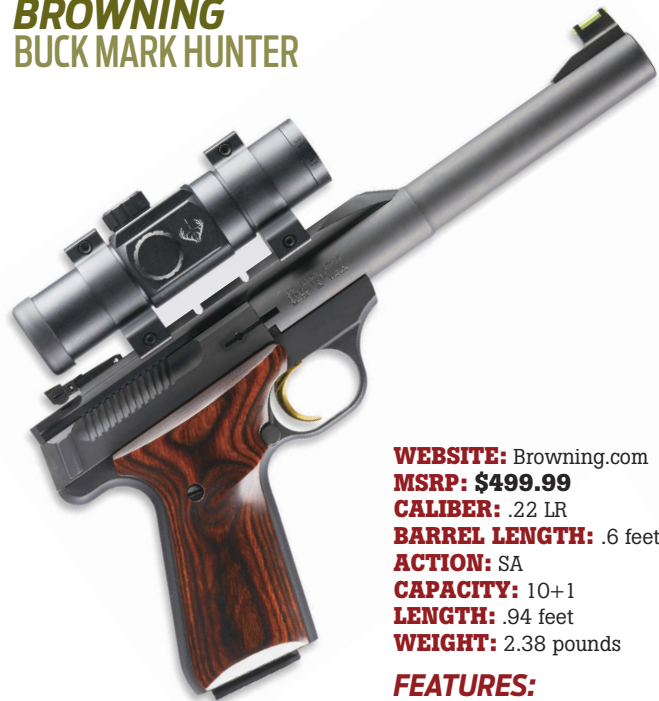

Today, there is a wide variety of guns and chamberings that can take down any animal that walks the Earth. Additionally, the engineering that goes into these modern hand cannons is leaps and bounds over what was available even 10 years ago.

Add to this the advances in ammunition and accessories, and the modern handgun hunter is better equipped than ever before.

The small game arena has not been left out, either. More models, variations and advances in the types and features of modern optics available make shooting them more fun and rewarding than ever.

We are sure that you will find something that makes the sport even more exciting in this guide.

Timeless Design

The 1911: The Preeminent Single-Action Semiautomatic

John Browning's eternal design will arguably stand as one of the finest handguns ever produced. Being used in multiple forms around the world for plinking, competition, hunting and defense, the pistol is also one of the most modified guns in existence because of that great design.

Looking at any magazine stand, online forum, or any formal or informal shooting match will attest to the popularity of the design, and the trend does not seem to be slowing down.

If Browning were alive today, he would be astonished at and very proud of what his timeless design has become. There is a reason that governments, militaries and shooters around the world have returned to the 1911 platform for over a hundred years when searching for a rugged and reliable handgun.

Look around at our catalog; all of these manufacturers have gone to great lengths to do justice to carry on the tradition of Browning and his 1911A1.

Small But Potent

Lightweight Concealable Guns for Personal Protection

The smallest of the small, but still potent. The variety in the small handgun market is testament to the popularity of these diminutive defensive pistols. These are available in either the Seecamp semi-autos or in revolvers such as the North American Arms. This category of handguns fit perfectly in an array of locations for personal defense.

Calibers for this class of handguns range in .22 short to the .45 long colt, and many calibers in between. Even the big boys like Beretta get into the act with its PICO .380 caliber semi-auto, proving that these classes of guns are an important niche in the realm of handguns for personal protection.

Lightweight, concealable and delivering serious defensive stopping power, the tiny concealable class of handguns is an important consideration for your personal protection.

Firearms for concealed carry often don't have room for your little finger, which can be rectified by use of magazines with finger-extension base plates.

Serious Calibers, Serious Purposes

These Concealed Carry Options Present the Best of Both Worlds

Concealed carry represents one of the most popular categories of handguns on the market today, and for good reason. These handguns have the ability to be chambered in serious calibers for serious purposes. Plus, they have enough size that you can control them even while firing those heavy cartridges. They are the best of both worlds.

Having a lawfully permitted concealed handgun on you carries with it immense responsibility. You also have a responsibility to practice with your chosen firearm in order to become proficient, if that day ever comes where you have to use that firearm to protect yourself or your loved ones. Shootability is a term for this class of concealed carry handguns.

The Originals

Revolvers Are the Standard for Defensive & Competition Handguns

From the early 19th-century firearms that settled the Old West through the famous firearms used in exhibition shoots around the country, the revolver represents the original standard for a defensive or competition handgun.

Chambering for this class of firearm runs the gamut from the ubiquitous 22LR that can be used for plinking, small game and even some steel-type competitions at the club level, up to the mighty

S&W 500 that is capable of taking down any animal on the face of the earth.

Literally hundreds of years of engineering and technology have gone into creating the contemporary revolver and the market has never been more robust and exciting.

We are sure that you will find something on the following pages to meet any need, from a concealed carry firearm to a large-framed hunting revolver.

The Old Pro

The Reliable .22LR Is Ideal for Hunting, Plinking & Competition

Arguably the most-used class of firearms, the ubiquitous .22LR has taught generations of young people the fundamentals of handgun and rifle marksmanship. There's no doubt that a major part of its popularity is because of the versatility of the round.

Used for everything from small-game hunting to plinking and Olympic competitions, the .22LR, in one form or another, should be in the gun cases of even the most casual shooter. One good aspect of the .22LR is that you can use it to develop muscle memory of many marksmanship fundamentals such as stance, position, grip, sight alignment, breathing and trigger control without spending a large amount of money.

The products featured on these pages represent many of the most popular firearms in this class. We hope that you will find something unique for your special application.

HOT ADD-ONS

Personalize Your Handgun & Drive Your Confidence Up

The accessory market for the modern handgun offers the shooter a huge variety of parts to make each firearm in their collection unique. Variations in iron sights, electronic optical sights and stocks make selecting the right accessory almost as much fun as installing and using it.

Many companies specialize in providing that shooter the optimal accessory to make a great handgun even better — a firearm that is personalized and enhanced for a particular sport or need can be even more effective than a stock handgun because the act of enhancing or personalizing it gives the user more confidence that the pistol will perform when needed.

Whether its night sights or tactical lights for personal defense, or an optical sight for a hunting handgun, we are sure that you can find an accessory here that will make the sport of shooting even better.

MOUNTS: Glock

FEATURES: Replaces rear sight, includes complete optical sight setup

This unique approach to mounting lasers on pistols that lack grip panels and dustcover accessory rails replaces the rear sight unit entirely. The OS Line laser features a 5.5mW laser that shines out of the front of a unit that includes a quick-acquisition sight system with a rear notch and front post sight above the laser. The existing front post on your pistol sits too low to use with this system. A sub-model includes a replacement front sight and a laser unit that has only the rear notch sight, which takes advantage of the longest sight radius possible atop your slide.

WEBSITE: DeepConceal.com
MSRP: $43.95

FITS: Most Handguns
HEIGHT ADJUSTMENT: 7 inches

FEATURES: Two sizes fit virtually all defensive handguns, hook-and-loop adjustment, extremely discreet design

This holster is meant to be worn beneath a button-down shirt and is designed to hold your handgun discreetly against your body in a modified shoulder holster position. It holds a spare magazine on the opposite side, which helps in part to balance the load.

GEMINI DEFENSE Z-FLEX FLIP-UP SIGHT

WEBSITE: GeminiDefense.com
MSRP: $99

HEIGHT: 0.6 inches
THICKNESS: 0.18 inches
WIDTH: 0.8 inches
WEIGHT: 0.75 ounces

FEATURES: Glowing dots and brackets, recharges with sunlight or flashlight, flips up/down

This truly unique sight flips up for CQB so that you fire when the portion of your target that you want to hit fills the aperture. For longer range shots (beyond 8 meters or so) you can flip the sight down and avail yourself of a more-traditional two-dot rear sight.

LASERLYTE CK-AMF Ruger/Kel-Tec

WEBSITE: LaserLyte.com
MSRP: $109.95

FEATURES: Mounts to subcompact polymer-frame pistols without rails

This laser is designed for the popular Ruger and Kel-Tec subcompact pistols. Because these pistols lack accessory rails or removable grip panels, the SML is designed to bolt onto the starboard side of the pistol and provide a 650nm red dot courtesy of four 377 batteries that last for five hours in constant use and 10 hours in pulse mode.

LASERMAX 5SD

WEBSITE: LaserMax.com
MSRP: $349.99

FEATURES: Replaces recoil guide rod, completely internal unit, completely holster-compliant

With many laser units, you need a custom holster that is designed to accommodate the under-barrel laser or the bulge in the grip panel. This unit fits completely inside your gun, though, so you can use the holster you're accustomed to. Turn it on via a switch that comes in a replacement takedown lever and you can easily turn it on and off.

LASERMAX UNIMAX-G

WEBSITE: LaserMax.com

MSRP: $349

FEATURES: Green beam, 1-ounce weight with batteries

This small laser can mount to pistols with at least 1.75 inches of rail length. It uses two tiny CR1/3N batteries. Like any good laser, it's adjustable for windage and elevation. What sets it apart, aside from its diminutive size, is the length of standard RIS rail formed into its body that allows a light or other accessory to mount directly to the laser unit.

MSRP: $564

ADJUSTMENT RANGE: 60 MOA

This sight also works with other pistols with a dovetail rear sight groove.

MEPROLIGHT NOVAK NIGHT SIGHTS

WEBSITE: Meprolight.com

MSRP: $164

MOUNT: Dovetail

FITS: 1911s from Colt, Taurus Springfield

FEATURES: Tritium sight inserts, snag-free low-slung design, retention screw

Night sights are a prerequisite for most defensive handguns and those from Meprolight feature very bright illumination. Designed in the Novak combat sight style that is frequently found on 1911s and higher-end defensive pistols, these sights are snag-free and should mount to any slide with a 1911-style rear sight dovetail, including the Taurus 24/7 pistols.

REVISION HELLFLY

WEBSITE: RevisionMilitary.com
MSRP: $99.99

UV RATING: Full Protection

FEATURES: Elastic headband, multiple spare lenses, padded carrying case

These glasses are rated to stop a 17-grain steel projectile at more than 900 feet per second. In Gun World field testing, they have kept our shooter's eyes safe from bullet splash on the range and a great number of airborne hazards around the workshop.

SIG SAUER ACP-L

WEBSITE: SigSauer.com
MSRP: $499

LENGTH: 1.17 feet
WIDTH: 2.75 inches

HEIGHT: 7 inches
WEIGHT: 1.08 pounds

FEATURES: Quick-detachable bungee sling, red-dot sight, cocking slide

SIG Sauer's dramatic ACP-L is a drop-over housing for its popular duty pistols that allows for the attachment of carbine accessories like lasers, lights and electronic sights, while retaining the ease of operation of their pistols. The single-point sling is meant to create a stable platform while pushing the pistol away, rather than attaching a stock, which would turn the gun into a short-barrel rifle.

STREAMLIGHT MODEL: TLR-4

WEBSITE: StreamLight.com

MSRP: $215

MOUNT: Picatinny

FEATURES: Integral laser, 11 hour run time, 110 lumens of illumination

Ammunition for Hunting, Competition & Defense

The best part about collecting firearms is taking the opportunity to shoot them. Within each category of firearms, there are many types, brands and configurations of ammunition for almost any shooting scenario.

There was a time when the only options for centerfire handgun ammunition were round-nose or a good JHP. Nowadays, the science of ballistics has given the modern shooter — whether he is a competitive shooter, hunter, or protecting his home or life — projectiles and loaded ammunition that are designed to perform under any conditions specifically for unique situations.

From the 22LR up to the largest rifle and handgun loads for dangerous game, the engineering that has gone into ammunition we shoot today is amazing. Look through the pages of this catalog and you will find a sample of some of the best ammunition and components in the business.
